REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

1. The claims 1-9 are allowable over the prior art of record for at least the reason that the prior art fails to teach or suggest a structure as in claim 1, comprising a temperature sensor "wherein the product of the thermal expansion coefficient of the second section of the rod and a length of the second section located in the switch housing is selected based on a product of the thermal expansion coefficient of the switch housing and a length of the switch housing between a side of the switch housing facing the cup and support members of the stationary switch contacts in a direction parallel to the rod, so that engagement between the at least one movable switching contact and the stationary contact is substantially independent of the thermal expansion of the housing." The aforementioned limitations in combination with all remaining limitations of the respective claims are believed to render said independent claims 1 and all claims dependent therefrom patentable over art of record.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."

2. The closest references to the present invention are believed to be as follows: Bayer (US 4,577,176) teaches a temperature sensor with a switch having a switch housing, a movable contact, stationary contacts, a rod and a tube wherein a portion of the tube adjacent to the housing has a coefficient of thermal expansion approximately equal to the rod, but fails to teach that the thermal expansion of the housing should be selected to match the portion of the rod within the housing. Bowling (US 4,008,454) teaches a temperature sensor with a switch having a switch housing, a movable contact, stationary contacts, a tube and a rod wherein a portion of the rod adjacent to the housing has a coefficient of thermal expansion approximately equal to the tube, but fails to teach that the thermal expansion of the housing should be selected to match the portion of the rod within the housing. Demarest (US 4,886,070), Wilson (US 5,036,236) and O'Rourke (US 5,390,542) teach sensors having housing materials selected for their thermal expansion matching the thermal expansion of elements within the housing, but lack the other structure of the claimed invention. Zanon et al. (US 5,032,818) teach a thermostat having a mechanical adjustment to correct for the thermal expansion of its housing, but fails to teach a housing material selected for its thermal expansion properties. These above listed references all lack the specific structure and arrangement in claim 1.

3. None of the cited above references, either taken alone or in combination is believed to render the present invention unpatentable as claimed.
